The Thought

Every profession, except teaching, has the provision of a systematic process through which the new entrant to the profession passes before taking up the actual job. Moreover the prospective teachers, particularly for technical institutes, do not get any input regarding teaching job during their professional courses.

The necessity for a faculty development program (FDP) on "Effective Teaching" has become more acute due to changed competency requirement of technical professionals worldwide. The present professionals need to possess the 'learning to learn skill' and 'creative thinking ability'. Hence there is an urgent need for change in the paradigm of technical education to ensure that the passouts of the technical education system are adequately prepared to face the challenges in their workplace of the 21st century.

The aim of this FDP is to enable the teachers of technical institutes to make the necessary paradigm changes in the learning-teaching process.

"Effective Teaching" - An Idea

Conventional techniques of teaching do not work to the extent required. Alternate teaching methods other than pure lecturing must be adopted to improve current students' learning.

When only 25% of the graduates meet fundamental requirements of recruiters, the education methods need to address this serious problem and improve this number. There is a dire need to improve and upgrade the faculties who are delivering education in our country. "Effective Teaching" workshop is recommended to faculties of all disciplines who can be benefited by learning various effective teaching techniques.

Eligibility Criteria

The program is open to all the faculty members and researchers of technical institutes including MCA and MBA colleges, engineering colleges and polytechnics, universities and other recognized colleges with preference to young teachers.
