R.C. Bhargava, chairman, Maruti Suzuki India Limited (MSIL). Says:' a promoter should certainly not think of his company's responsibility only in terms of financial interest as often happen. Also charitable acts should not get precedence over protecting the interest of the direct stakeholders and the environment. I believe every company must understand and implement measures which would enable sustained growth and prevent bankruptcy as closure of a company would lead to disruption in the lives of many in the society and may often cause serve hardship to the weaker amongst stakeholders'. He goes on emphasise that in India government policy to promote infrastructure and heavy industries through public sector was to bring about economic growth with equity. He cites MSIL as an example in this context,' the parliament decided that a government company should be established to modernize the Indian automobile industry. The management of MSIL decided that this objective had to receive its undivided attention'. The company retained this as the focus of its objective and works out strategies as to how the same could be accomplished within the constraint of operating as a public sector company. 'Maruti recognized that the then
