PANEL DISCUSSION ON RESEARCH NEEDS IN HUMAN RESOURCE MANAGEMENT IN INDIAN INDUSTRY

Indian industry has been successful in attracting FDI by best global brands in practically every segment of Industry. While the world has become smaller as far as availability of goods and services is concerned, the cross cultural management practices and in specific the HR practices have been found to be quite diverse. Also, many a vibrant industry sectors like the IT sector or the Banking sector, by virtue of transformational or marginal innovations in product or services, call for supportive HR systems and practices so that a pro-active culture that can sustain continuous development is established. In one line therefore, we can say that Industry is constantly innovating its functional practices to closely and confidently pursue the strategic visions: be it large or small.

We, at Management Schools, must essentially study what industries, in India and abroad, are doing to achieve their functional excellence and how they have re-engineered their HR function to facilitate other organizational functions so as to achieve the organization’s strategic vision. By doing so, we will be better equipped to educate our students and thereby prepare them to contribute to industry from day 1 as they enter the corporate world.

With this need in mind, the HR Skills Council of GTU has designed a Panel Discussion to be held on 5th November 2012 (Monday) at Gujarat Technological University, Gandhinagar Campus.

AIM:

1. To mobilize the HR Faculty of MBA Schools of different towns – small and large – of Gujarat Technological University to work on a common platform for meaningful research.
2. To facilitate HR faculty to enhance their competency levels in Research
